Jacquelyn C. Campbell, Ph.D., RN, FAAN
Anna D. Wolf Chair and Professor at the Johns Hopkins University School of Nursing

Dr. Jacquelyn C. Campbell is the Anna D. Wolf Endowed Chair and a professor in the Johns Hopkins University School of Nursing, with a joint appointment in the Bloomberg School of Public Health. She is also the national program director of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Nurse Faculty Scholars Program.

Dr. Campbell has been conducting advocacy policy work and research in the area of domestic violence since 1980. She has been the principal investigator of 12 major research grants and has published more than 220 articles and seven books on domestic violence.

Dr. Campbell has received numerous awards, including elected membership in the Institute of Medicine and the American Academy of Nursing; three honorary doctorate degrees; and the Pathfinder Award from Friends of the National Institute of Nursing Research. She is also co-chair of the Institute of Medicine Forum on Global Violence Prevention; is chair of the board of directors of Futures Without Violence; was a member of the congressionally appointed U.S. Department of Defense Task Force on Domestic Violence; and has been a board member at three shelters.

Melissa d’Arabian
Celebrity chef, television host, author

A trusted resource and empowering role model, Melissa d’Arabian offers unique yet relatable food and lifestyle solutions as part of a bigger story about how to eat well, be a responsible consumer and spend with purpose.

Melissa is an Alpha Chi Omega alumna and was initiated into the Alpha Iota chapter at University of Vermont in 1987. With an MBA from Georgetown University, Melissa enjoyed a successful career in corporate finance and strategy before becoming a stay-at-home mom. Passionate about sharing her tried-and-true recipes and money-saving tactics, Melissa then competed on and won season five of The Next Food Network Star and is now well known as the host of Food Network’s Ten Dollar Dinners and Cooking Channel’s Drop 5 Lbs with Good Housekeeping.

Melissa’s newest projects include a FoodNetwork.com web-exclusive series, The Picky Eaters Project: Melissa’s Mealtime Redesign, and serving as a regular judge on primetime Food Network competition series Guy’s Grocery Games. Her Ten Dollar Dinners cookbook debuted in August 2012 as a New York Times bestseller, and her second cookbook is due out in late 2014. She’s also a contributing writer for Food Network’s FN Dish blog.

Stay in touch with Melissa on Facebook (facebook.com/darabianmelissa) and Twitter (twitter.com/MelissadArabian). Visit her website at www.melissadarabian.net.
Sherrill Diller, Ph.D.

Dr. Sherrill Diller is a dynamic and accomplished speaker who has provided inspiration and information to more than 700 audiences worldwide, ranging from small corporate groups to packed auditoriums. She has conducted seminars and delivered keynote addresses in Australia, New Zealand, Canada, the United Kingdom and Europe and throughout the United States.

Sherrill is an Alpha Chi Omega alumna and was initiated into the Epsilon Psi chapter at the University of California - Irvine, in 1985. During her time at the university, she served as both corresponding secretary and first vice president for her chapter. She graduated in 1989 with a double major in English and drama.

Today, Sherrill combines her corporate experience with a strong academic background to create customized, current and thoroughly researched programs. She earned her master’s degree and doctorate from Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia, where she taught for four years before starting her own training business. While working on her Ph.D., Sherrill specialized in English and women's studies, resulting in her passionate commitment to her topics: emotional intelligence, communication skills and the empowerment of women.

When not on the road speaking, Sherrill is delighted to spend her time at home in sunny San Diego, California.

Sharon Love
Co-Founder of the One Love Foundation

Sharon Love co-founded the One Love Foundation in May 2010 with family and friends to honor the memory of her daughter, Yeardley Reynolds Love, a former University of Virginia student-athlete who was killed by her ex-boyfriend. Through education and technology, the One Love Foundation’s mission is to end relationship violence.

Since launching the foundation, Sharon has served as an ambassador for the Violence Against Women Act and had the opportunity to speak out against relationship violence at the White House in February 2012 as a special guest of Vice President Joe Biden.

In September 2012, the One Love Foundation launched its “Be 1 for Change” initiative in conjunction with the Johns Hopkins School of Nursing and Bloomberg School of Public Health. The long-term campaign is designed to raise awareness and change attitudes about relationship violence throughout the United States, and it includes the creation of a free and anonymous danger-assessment mobile application, the first of its kind.

Sharon is a lifelong resident of Maryland and currently resides in Cockeysville. For more information about the One Love Foundation, please visit joinonelove.org.
Stacy Nadeau

In the summer of 2005, six women, including Stacy Nadeau, made national news when they appeared on a Times Square billboard, dressed only in their underwear. While other nearby billboards featured actresses and supermodels, this one, promoting Dove brand products, promoted “real women with real curves.” The nation went wild. Dove’s mission was “to make more women feel beautiful every day by widening the stereotypical theme of beauty and by inspiring women to take great care of themselves.”

Suddenly, Stacy, an industrial organizational psychology major at Depaul University, was thrust into the national spotlight. As one of the real women featured in the ad campaign, she quickly emerged as a spokeswoman for healthy body image. She appeared on CNN, the Today Show, Ellen, Dr. Phil, Tyra and Oprah (twice).

Stacy lives in Chicago, Illinois, and works full-time to empower women everywhere. She will join us in Palm Desert to speak about her experience and how we can begin to change the media’s interpretation of women.

Kathy Savitt
Yahoo! CMO

Kathy Savitt is an Alpha Chi Omega alumna and was initiated into the Zeta Phi chapter at Cornell University in 1984. She currently serves as Yahoo!’s CMO, where she has responsibility for global marketing, media and customer experience.

Before joining Yahoo!, Kathy was Founder and CEO of Lockerz, later Ador which sold to LightInTheBox Holding Co, an international online retail company that delivers products to consumers in over 200 countries. Founded in 2009, Lockerz focused on innovating the way Millennials discover and consume content and products.

Prior to Lockerz, Kathy was executive vice president and chief marketing officer at American Eagle Outfitters, Inc., where she led both the global marketing efforts of the company’s portfolio of brands as well as the digital and e-commerce channels. She also served as vice president of strategic communications, content and entertainment initiatives for Amazon.com.

Kathy’s entrepreneurial spirit was evident early in her career. She founded her first company, an integrated marketing communications firm called MWW/Savitt, before she turned 30. During her 10 years at MWW/Savitt, she represented some of the world’s most influential Fortune 500 brands and helped launch more than 100 start-ups.

In addition to serving as Yahoo!’s CMO, Kathy is also a member of the board of directors of Vitamin Shoppe, Inc. She graduated from Cornell University with a bachelor of arts degree in history and government.